A WORD ABOUT THE CHAUTAUQUA

The fact that Norway and South Paris and surrounding country are to have the benefit of a Community Chautauqua this year for the first time from July 13th, to and including July 17, is of such importance that every one should plan to be present at part of the entertainments at least.

The Chautauqua, not Chickamauga as some are wont to call it, is a course of high grade lectures and entertainments, given by the best of talent and are the same grade of entertainments as are given in the large cities. The Chautauqua is non-partisan, non-sectorial, non-denominational, it is backed by the business men of Norway and South Paris, and is assisted by the lodges, the churches, the different clubs and in fact is for everyone, men, women and children of the whole community.

The entertainments will be given in a large water-proof tent at the fair grounds. This tent will seat about 1100 people.

The Junior Chautauqua.

One of the best worth while features of the week will be Junior Chautauqua. It is the aim of this department to bring to the children of the community the five happiest days of the year—the five days that they will think about and talk about all the rest of the year.

Every forenoon the Chautauqua playground will be open to the children and there will be no fee. A trained worker a graduate of Columbia University will be in charge to direct the boys and girls. She will be assisted by Mildred Holmes, Genevieve Barker, Marjorie Barker, Ruth Cummings and Marion Haskell. At 3 o'clock on the first day the Junior Chautauqua will be formed. Forenoons the children's Chautauqua will begin at nine o'clock with two forenoon sessions. The play hours will include games and other sports, a hike and "bacon bat," a field meet, story hour, picnic breakfast, and other interesting things for the little folks.

During the afternoon at 3 o'clock will be the story hour for the children having season tickets.

TRUTH TRIUMPHS

Norway Citizens Testify for the Public Benefit.

A truthful statement of a Norway citizen, given in his own words, should convince the most skeptical about the merits of Doan's Kidney Pills. If you suffer from backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, urinary disorders or any form of kidney ills, use a tested kidney medicine.

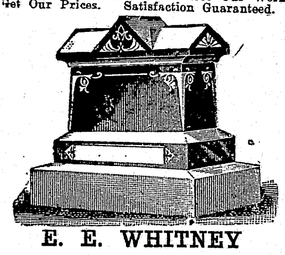

A Norway citizen tells of Doan's Kidney Pills.

Could you demand more convincing proof of merit?

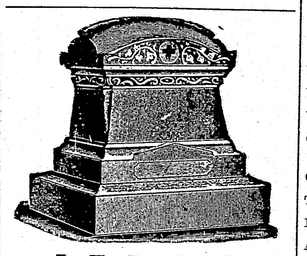

E. C. Libby, deputy sheriff, Sanborn St., Norway, says: "I had backache and it annoyed me to do anything. Not only this, but my head ached very often. I noticed little specks before my eyes and my sight blurred. I used various medicines, but it was left for Doan's Kidney Pills to give me lasting results. Since using them I have had no return of the complaint."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Libby had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Watch Your Health
—Keep Well!
People who grow careless about their daily habits seldom reach old age. Disease claims them before their allotted time; they die prematurely. Nature must be served. She is long suffering, but you cannot escape the consequences of neglecting her daily demands. For your health's sake, answer promptly every call of the bowels and kidneys. Make this the most important thing of the day, and give it instant attention, if you hope to keep well and live long. Whenever the stomach or bowels fail to act thoroughly, take "L. F." Atwood's Medicine, and be free from constipation and its long train of ills. When the stomach, liver or blood need regulating, it acts promptly, and is safe for every member of the family.
Buy a 35c bottle at your nearest store, or write to-day for free sample.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

Pretty soft for all day hikin' through the stingin' alkali,
Pretty new to beans an' bacon and a total lack o' pie;
They will do a lot o' marchin' 'fore they get the army swing,
They will do a heap o' duckin' when they hear the bullets sing.
What's ahead o' them down yonder ain't no fall maneuver game—
It's a mess o' blood an' trouble, but they're goin' just the same!
Sure they're goin'! From all corners of the city, far an' near,
They are crowdin' one another to be first to answer "Here!"
Every man with eyes wide open, not a one that doesn't know
Just exactly what is waitin' on the way they've got to go.
Pretty soft an' shy o' trainin', but they only are afraid
That the word that sends 'em forward may be too blame long delayed.
Time will put the trainin' in 'em; time will learn 'em how to hike.
Time—an' Mexicans—will show 'em what a battlefield is like.
Appetite will sauce their rations, when there ain't no choice o' food,
An' you've marched from dawn to sunset anything you get is good.
But the grit an' nerve an' courage that meet danger with a song
They won't find 'em on the border—they are takin' them along!

THE FLAG OF BETSY ROSS.

Long are the years that it drifts across—
The tale that is dear and dim,
Of Washington's visit to Betsey Ross
And the flag that she made for him—
The tale of the flag with the radiant folds
And the stars in the field of blue
And well have we cherished all it holds
That has thrilled us through and through.
And well do we treasure still the scene
In the quaint old Quaker town,
Over the folds with their silken sheen
The seamstress is bending down.
The roses are blooming beside the door
Where the fragrant breeze comes through,
The breeze that will welcome forevermore
The Red and the White and the Blue.
And the eyes of the seamstress, what do they see
In the stars she has circled there?
The sign of a Union that shall be
Forever free and fair!
So the vision grows as her needle flies
Through hurrying hours, and then,
When the sun is low in the Western sky,
The General comes again.
All this we have read; but who can tell
Of the flag that she made that day?
What was its fate, and what befell
When the General rode away?
O, where did it fly and where did it fade,
And where was it last hauled down—
The flag that Betsey, the seamstress, made
In the quaint old Quaker town?
Did it fly perchance in the battle smoke,
The target of shot and shell?
Did it hear the cheers when the enemy broke,
And the groans of the men who fell?
Did it wave o'er the ranks of buff and blue,
And the glory of victory share,
When the blood-red banner of Britain flew
But a captive trophy there?
Did it fly, perchance, in the favoring breeze,
On a ship that sailed afar
Beyond the farthermost sweep of seas
Where the Islands of Mystery are?
Did it know the lash of the roaring gales,
And the kiss of the salty foam?
Did it flutter aloft when the weathered sails
Were furled in the harbor of home?
Did it fly, perchance, o'er the teeming town,
When the land knew peace again,
Wherever its gleaming stars looked down
On the ways of busy men.
Where every wind that its stripes could know
Brought a message fair and good,
Of the spirit that blessed the square below,
Where the church and the school-house stood?
O, where did it fly, and where did it fade,
And where was it last hauled down
The flag that Betsey, the seamstress, made
In the quaint old Quaker town?
It is vain to ask; we only know
That the fabric fell in dust
And went to the Land Where Lost Things Go,
As every fabric must.
The fabric faded and fell apart;
Yet the beautiful flag we know
Is the flag unfading that thrilled the heart
Of Washington long ago!
And in that flag through the years to be,
Wherever its free folds toss,
Shall the eyes of a loyal people see
The flag of Betsey Ross!

THE RICHEST MAN IN THE WORLD.

Not Rockefeller, Morgan, Rothschild, nor Krupp. The richest man in the world is no mere multimillionaire, whose wealth can be estimated by the income-tax experts. He is the Czar of Russia and no man living knows his wealth. His income is said to be a million or so dollars a day, so that one could roughly work out a capital of something like 10 to 30 billions as the sum of his possessions, but after all it is only guesswork.

As head of the church, he owns all of the church property of the realm, amounting to billions. But that can be left out of consideration. He owns in his own name 150,000,000 acres of land, and upon this land are the most magnificent timber, the most colossal mines and agricultural lands enough to furnish food for a nation of people. The state or government, pays him a salary of $10,000,000 a year; and if he wanted more, all he would have to do would be to sign an order demanding it, since he is the state himself, in a sense.

The Czar pays his own expenses. That is, he maitains his own palaces and royal residences, some 100 in number, and takes care of the cost of the household of all of the royal personages of the nation. This involves some 30,000 servants, 300 automobiles, 5,000 horses, and a small army of soldiers and secret service men. So it is necessary that he have considerable income.

All of the mines of Siberia are owned by the Czar personally. He gets a royalty upon every ounce of mineral that is mined. The agricultural lands are being worked into timber, which must be accounted for. So no matter how the war terminates, unless Germany is able to overrun Russia and take the entire country, the Czar isn't likely to suffer from the heat in summer or the cold in winter.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's Liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

NEW PERFECTION KITCHEN PRIMER

LESSON 6

What Makes Dish Washing Easy?

Plenty of hot water.

What makes plenty of hot water?

The New Perfection Kerosene Water Heater makes plenty of hot water—ready whenever you want it.

But doesn't it cost a lot?

No, it costs less than it would to keep a hot fire going in the range, and the kitchen stays cool. If you have a New Perfection Water Heater and a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove, you can save no end of fuss and bother.

New Perfection oil-burning devices owe their success to the famous long blue chimney burner, which converts every drop of oil into clear, intense heat. The 1916 models have the new patented reversible glass reservoir and many other improvements.

WAR HORSES WE HAVE SOLD

Nearly 750,000 horses and mules have been purchased in the United States for foreign account since Sept. 1, 1914. While this number is but a small percentage of America's horse and mule stock, the business has nevertheless been a tremendous one. Twenty-two horses make up an average freight or express load. That means that 34,000 carloads have ben shipped from the country to the coast, taking no account of short local shipments. These horses have traveled no less than an average of 1,000 miles each. The 34,000 cars earned for the railroad and expeess companies $5,000,000.

It was a lucky horse that voyaged from farm to steamboat in less than 15 days. Six million dollars for feed in stables, markets, stockyards and concentration camps is a low estimate of the cost. Turned out in pens such as are used at our Chicago stockyards, the horses would require for comfortable housing 37,500 pens. With the necessary alleys, feed barns, hay sheds and railroad facilities, these pens would cover a ground floor area a mile in width by 2 miles in length—a space twice as large as the Union Stock Yard of Chicago, which accommodates 506,000 animals of different sizes.

Placed side by side in one long row of single stalls the war horses would stretch from Chicago's city limits to Grand Island, Neb. In marching order, close formation, the 300,000 cavalry and 2,500 full batteries of 180 horses each, would reach from Chicago to Boston.

We have left 40 times as many horses as we have gone, but we should remember that those which have gone are practically all of the best of three types. There will be a brilliant market for these three types for several years after the European conflict is over, and there will be time enough in which to get a colt well started long before that devoutly wished-for peace comes into sight.

ROAD BOOK FOR 1916.

The Maine Automobile Road Book for 1916 has just been issued for its fifth year by the Maine Automobile Association, and it is now being sent out to the 3,000 members of that organization, as well as to the general public. This year's book contains 400 pages, making it a very much larger volume than the 1915 edition. It has about 220 routes, covering all of Maine, the greater part of New Hampshire, most of Massachusetts, as well as New Brunswick and Quebec. A new feature of this year is the through routes between New York City, southwestern New England and Maine. These are given in both directions. This year's volume has about one-third more routes than any previous edition, and in addition contains the famous Pine Tree Tour now followed annually by hundreds of tourists. A large number of one-way routes of 1915 are this year given in both directions.

A new and decidedly valuable feature this year is a series of 14 city and town street-maps, showing the principal entrances and exits. Another new feature is a greatly enlarged general road map showing all of the automobile roads in Maine.

An important contribution is an article on what the Maine State Highway Commission has accomplished and what it intends to do this year, by Paul D. Sargent, chief engineer of the Maine State Highway Commission. Other special features are a digest of the Maine Automobile laws, the Maine fish and game laws for 1916, Maine laws regulating the setting of fires on forest and timberland, the department entitled Facts about Maine, greatly enlarged and improved, the through routes of travel put in a form which for simplicity can hardly be equalled, ferry timetables, regulations for motorists entering Canada, and many others.

The series of indexes are the most complete and most simple to be found in any road book, every minute detail of the volume being covered.

The book is fully illustrated with new pictures, and is attractively bound in a green waterproof leatherette with specially designed covers. It contains three large touring maps, enclosed in a pocket in the back of the book, and every point of interest is fully described in the descriptive matter with which the book is well filled. The book is published by the Touring Bureau of the Maine Automobile Association, 12 Monument Square, Portland, Me.

Eye Enables Typewriter to Copy Automatically.

A self-operating eye, which when attached to a typewriter enables that machine to copy any printed matter properly set before it, is the invention of a Brooklyn electrical engineer. The eye consists of a large sphere having a lens on its front side and a field corresponding to a retina on which are situated a large number of selenium cells connected with a source of electric current. The eye is mounted on and moves with the carriage of the typewriter and is so focused that the image of but one letter is reflected in it at a time. Popular Mechanics Magazine in its July number tells how the machine operates.

The Whole Family Would Enjoy This

GET your mind off the butcher, the baker and the rent collector. Pull yourself out of the daily grind—and with a few days' let up, a few deep breaths and a short rest, you will get back into the harness FRESHER, and you'll feel better for it. The Community Chautauqua will give you a chance for a little easing up these hot summer days. Knock off some of the work and get under the tent for a good physical and mental bracer.

Brought Right to Your Door

AND there's the family too. Traveling in hot weather isn't altogether pleasant, but a vacation BROUGHT RIGHT TO YOUR DOOR isn't bad, is it? The big music of this five day festival of music ought to appeal to them. And if they "never liked lectures" the Chautauqua's got a surprise for them! And then there are the entertainment numbers, all these ten great programs for a few cents each. Remember a season ticket cuts the cost in half, and a season ticket bought now costs 25 cents less than it will cost a little later.

The Junior Chautauqua promises a world of delights for the boys and girls. It will be in the forenoons, and they will play games, have story telling hours, athletic events and a host of things that will keep them busy and happy every minute.

A Whole Family and Community Affair

THE Chautauqua is essentially an affair for the whole family and the entire community. The committee's hope is to make it an event of special interest to father, mother and the "kiddies." There are numbers on the program that will have a special appeal to the business man, the farmer, the lawyer, preacher, doctor, manufacturer, the clerk, the laboring man and the bank president. The mother will find many features especially helpful, and the boys and girls will get a little different look at life through these great inspirational numbers. And there will be entertainment for every one.

A handsomely illustrated program booklet has been issued that gives full particulars, prices of tickets, description and list of talent and the program for each day.

Wouldn't it be a fine thing to give yourself and the family a five day treat right here at home? Then get season tickets and attend the

JOSEPH ROBINSON PARROTT.

Among the first clients of the law firm Mr. Parrott was connected with was the Jacksonville, Tampa & Key West Railroad Company, a John the Baptist railroad, their locomotives crying, or rather screeching, in the wilderness. A pioneer railroad, or a pioneer anything, does not have an easy time. They penetrate a land where business is yet in embryo. The Jacksonville, Tampa & Key West Railroad was no exception and it was soon forced into a receiver's hands. Mr. Parrott was the receiver. He did his best to put the road on a paying basis, but it was a long time investment and it needed capital furnished by some one who had faith in the future of Florida.

At about this time amid the winter birds of passage was General Henry M. Flagler, a man rich with the profits of Standard Oil but poor in health. He was anxious to exchange the dividends of that Croesus enterprise for health, and the sub-tropic sun and gulf breezes brought it. A land which restored health was worth cultivating. A man would give all he possessed for health, therefore exploitation must be profitable. Such must have been the thoughts which passed through General Flagler's brain, so he was ready to purchase this bankrupt railroad when approached by Mr. Parrott with a proposition to invest and assist in developing one of the best states in the Union.

General Flagler was a host in himself. His bank account alone was sufficient to develop this land of sunshine, and his will was as good as his financial ability. Dreams floated through his brain, not only of railroads, but steamships, palatial hostelries and new cities. He needed a lieutenant, and he chose Mr. Parrott, who had already had some experience in taming the wilderness and making it blossom like the rose; so he left his Blackstone to grow dusty on the shelves to take up the more active life of hotel, railroad and steamship manager, colonizer and builder of cities.

The first part of General Flagler's dream was easy of fulfillment, if provided with an ample pocketbook, but there comes an end to dreams and it looked as if the end of Flagler's had come when the far point of the Florida coast, where ocean and gulf clasp hands, had been reached. But it did not so appear to General Flagler. His fancy skipped from key to key out into the blue gulf until Key West was reached. How the intervening space of water was filled with concrete archways is a tale that has been many times told, and each time the wonder grows. Tunneling mountains becomes commonplace beside this giant bridge, the supervision of which was the privilege of Mr. Parrott.

Perhaps a summary of the construction of this road may be permissable here. It extends from Jacksonville to Key West. The entire distance is about 520 miles. The first 394 miles is albng the east coast of Florida (hence the name, East Coast Railway), then it leaves the main land to skirt the line of keys extending to the southern terminal, a distance of 126 miles. Of this section, 74 miles is over land, 25 miles is through swamps, and 29 over water. Of the roadbed, 97 miles was grade over land, 23 miles embankment through water, and about six miles of concrete arch and steel span work. The material used was 176,900 cubic yards of crushed rock, 106,100 cubic yards of sand, 286,800 barrels of cement, 5,760 tons of reinforcing steel and 612,200 lineal feet of piling. The average cost per mile for building this extension was $95,000.

This dream was not the first of General Flagler's visions. It was the climax of a series of dreams. Materializing these visions took decades and untiring energy. So severe was the work that Mr. Parrott lost his health. He was a much younger man than Flagler. The work was pushed strenuously that the older man might see the fulfillment of his dreams. He did see the fulfillment—the Promised Land—but barely, and Mr. Parrott survived him only by a few months.

During his active life, he took few vacations. Each autumn, he spent a few days in his boyhood home; but with failing health he was forced to take more frequent and longer breathing spells. It was a dream of his boyhood to visit the Old World, but the demands of his vocation were so strong that it was put off until sickness made a change of environment advisable; but the pleasure of the trip was thereby greatly diminished.

Lake Thompson was one of the attractions of his boyhood. He sailed its surface, swam in its depths, and camped on its islands. One of the latter—Megquier Island—he bought in his later years, connecting it with neighboring islands and the main land by bridges and erected a beautiful summer home. This island, comprising some fifty acres, was named after Edward Megquier, first owner and also first settler in that part of Poland (in 1790) on a strip of highland adjacent to the lake opposite to the island, and now known as Megquier Hill. Tradition has it that it was cleared of the heavy forest which covered it in 1815, during the three years of famine which Maine suffered from extremely cold weather. It was planted to corn the next year and by reason of the vapor arising from the water, the crop was saved from frost and matured, the only crop to ripen in the vicinity. To this island he came each summer for the last year or two of his life, and it was here that he died, October 13, 1913, at an age of a few days less than 55 years.

His body was carried to Florida for interment. He loved Oxford, but his life had been spent in Florida, and it was there he wished to rest finally. He was greatly missed there. No newspaper was too obscure not to contain an editorial or biographical notice of his passing, and the prominent ones devoted pages to his memory and accomplishments. His name was coupled with Flagler's. They were called the two great Floridians, although neither was a native of the state.

Mr. Parrott married Helen Mercier, of New Haven, who survives him, and he had a daughter, Helen, who married Gordon R. MacDonald of New York.—Sprague's Journal of Maine History.

Everett A. Milner of Ware, Mass., has purchased of Leon A. Jack the Cumberland House property at Bridgton, the transfer having been made Wednesday of this week. This is the hotel for years conducted by the Bacon sisters and purchased by Mr. Jack only a short time ago.

Why has Christianity been powerless to abolish war? Christianity would have abolished war centuries ago if men had lived it one-half as vociferously as they have professed it. "He professed religion." "He lived religion."

Cummings the premises described in said Clause 5, subject to the above mentioned mortgage held by said Luther F. Pike, which Warranty Deed is duly recorded with same Registry, Book 172, Page 66, whereby the said Charles B. Cummings acquired title therein, in fee simple.

EIGHTH: Said Charles B. Cummings, subsequent to taking title to said last named parcel of real estate, and prior to his death, paid said mortgage in full; yet the same has never been cancelled or discharged on said records.

NINTH: On January 26th, A. D. 1899, the said Charles B. Cummings died testate, and by his last Will and Testament, duly proved and allowed in the Probate Court within and for said County of Oxford, as a part of the residue and remainder of his estate, devised both parcels of land herein described to Stephen B. Cummings, George I. Cummings and Edwin S. Cummings, his sons, share and share alike.

TENTH: On March 4th, A. D. 1914, the said George I. Cummings died intestate, leaving a widow, Inez S. Cummings, aforesaid, and two minor children, viz: Charles F. Cummings and Julia E. Cummings, the said Inez S. Cummings having been duly appointed by said Probate Court as their guardian.

ELEVENTH: The said Stephen B. Cummings, Edwin S. Cummings, Inez S. Cummings and Inez S. Cummings, Guardian, therefore complain and say that the above described mortgages, recorded in the Registry of Deeds within and for the County of Oxford, as aforesaid, although they have been paid in full, never having been discharged on said records, constitute a cloud upon their title to said real estate; that although they have bargained to sell said real estate to the Norway Realty Company, a corporation organized by law and existing at said Norway, they have been and are now unable to complete said transaction, by reason of said cloud upon the title to their said real estate, the said Norway Realty Company refusing to pay over the sum agreed upon as the purchase price thereon, or to accept your Complainants' Warranty Deed until said cloud shall have been removed.

TWELFTH: That the heirs of the said John M. Cummings and of the said Hannah C. Cummings and their whereabouts are unknown to your Complainants; that the heirs of the said William C. Cummings and their whereabouts are unknown, except one Fannie Schwartz, whose residence is now in said Norway; that the heirs of the said Luther F. Pike, so far as known to your Complainants are Frank T. Pike and A. L. F. Pike, both of said Norway.

WHEREFORE, said Complainants pray:

FIRST: That the Court order such notice of the pendency of these proceedings as the nature thereof may require.

SECOND: That the Court order the mortgages hereinbefore enumerated, discharged on the records in the office of the Registry of Deeds, within and for said County of Oxford.

THIRD: That said Complainants may have such other and further relief as the nature of the case may require.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form.

Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little. if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it.

GODMOTHER'S MOVEMENT.

Soldiers Gone to the Front will Receive Words of Cheer.

A movement has been started whereby all soldiers who have gone to the front who are not leaving some mother, wife or sister at home, may receive cheer from some woman who is willing to act as a Godmother to him.

This will insure every soldier at the front receiving cheering letters, comfort bags, books or any sort of cheer which his Godmother may be able to send him. Many of course will send only letters, but even these will be received with pleasure by the boys who are away from home, perhaps in many cases as much as some greater gift which some may be able to give.

The idea of this service comes from France, where the women have done such patriotic work for their soldiers with remarkable results, for besides bringing cheer to many lonely soldier boys, it gives to many women a chance for patriotic expression which they might not be able to perform in any other way.

Through the presidents of women's clubs, this idea is expected to spread and the women of Maine will, no doubt, not be behind hand in forwarding the good work. The service expected from the women is only the kind that any woman would give who has sent a son or brother to the front, and would be of great worth both to the giver and the one who receives.

Birthday of Republic.

This Fourth of July was the 140th anniversary of the nation's natal day. There exists among some iconoclastic people a disposition to adversely criticise our national holiday, but they are very few in number. Hardly a single American at home or abroad who does not feel his patriotic impulse stirred by the memories of the glorious Fourth. It is indeed a glorius ideal which we celebrate. It is in fact the beginning of the greatest political experiment in the interest of the masses of mankind ever undertaken in the history of the world.

Few there were among the signers of the Declaration of Independence who had even a partial conception of the possible results of their experiment. The world prior to 1776 had been governed by the rules of kingcraft and priest-craft. The human mind had been enslaved by the superstitious growing out of the debasing beliefs in the rule of alleged divine right of these two classes of men. Release from the thralldom of these beliefs the mind of man began to act freely.

The act of the Fourth of July, 1776, in Philadelphia influenced the men of all races and will continue to influence them throughout all the coming ages. It is not too much to say that the amazing development of the physical sciences in the nineteenth century is indirectly due to the Declaration. In the strictly immaterial improvement of social conditions the advance has been almost equally marked.

WHEN CITY AND COUNTRY MEET.

In the fruit section of the Blue Ridge a city vacationist drank in the scenery nd gave Nature the favor of his approval. Adown the hill a bit a sturdy figure in week-day garb inspired the city man to say:

"It is fine to run away from the city life and noise to the simplicity and quiet of the country, and I find much interest in the country people—such as that old man down there."

It was to laugh. The old man was a famous preacher with a great city congregation. When he heard the remark about him he chuckled: "I'll make you a bet"—he never pays his bets, so it needn't shock you; it's a mere habit of speech—"I'll make you a bet that fellow is one of the city yilks"—nobody knows what a yilk is; another hobit of speech—"a yilk who was too good for farm work and who moved to town and became a mold of fashion and an ass of form." He talks that way when he is out on the hills. "I'll bet both of us came from farms."

So, in the interest of scientific inquiry, we got into contact with mountainside gossip. And it was so—our typical city man was once a poor country boy.

Then the big man said: "This talk about city people and country people makes me tired. Why, some of the fussiest and most overdressed persons in my flock are country people aping city ways. Maybe country people have more sense than city people—I don't know. Why city people or country people? Why not just people? There isn't any difference except the difference that don't count."

Here the big man's wife—she was also born in the country—spoke with the voice of finality: "Yes, you men are all alike—tall savages. If it were not for women you would never know the value of a clean collar, much less of a respectable suit of clothes. Your back-to-Nature talk is simply an apology for your laziness."

City and country are meeting more than ever this summer. Travelers are staying in America and that means tens of millions of dollars invested in rural living, whether it be in mansion or in boarding house. Get acquainted. City or country doesn't matter. If we are any good at all we are just people.

MAN'S STRENGTH IS DECEPTIVE

He is of Markedly Weaker Constitution Than a Woman.

It is customary to speak of man as stronger than woman, though this is half true, half false; for although he is stronger of frame and muscle and more active, he is of markedly weaker constitution, less resistant to the enemies of life. And this difference seems native and intrinsic, not due to externals or to the chance arrangements of society; for already in infancy the man-child is more open to the attack of mortal disease; where a hundred girl-babies die in their first year of life, our census shows that there die about 130 boys.

In the sense-organs there is a difference closer to what we know of mind, and which is not wholly in accord with the common thought that women are more sensitive than men. They are more delicate of touch, and can perceive certain tastes, notably sweet, at a low degree that escapes the man, although for salt and sour and bitter, as well as for smell in general, the evidence is not too clear. In Miss Nelson's experiments in California the men were able to hear fainter tones, and for all but one of several pure colors of the spectrum the men, contrary to the popular belief, detected the color at a lower intensity than did the women.

But beside this difference in the senses when they are normal, serious defects of eye and ear come far more often to the man and to the man-child. Color-blindness, which is usually innate and is therefore not to be ascribed to the manner in which man lives and works, is about tenfold more frequent among men. Of the number reported totally blind in our country, about 20,000 are male and 15,500 are female. As proof that this great excess of the male blind is not entirely due to the greater danger in men's work, there is a great excess of males among those blind at birth. The most serious defects of hearing also occur oftener among men; for of those reported in our census as totally deaf, there are thousands more males than there are females.

Road! Road! Road!

Last week we mentioned the condition of the road to West Paris over the hills. Since then the showers have made the bad places many times worse. The street leading from Bacon's planing mill past Clarence Perham's to the lower railroad crossing is a disgrace to the town. We do not blame the road commissioners or the weather, but it seems as if something must be wrong with our system of road building, or our roads would improve instead of growing worse. We are glad we have a good State trunk line leading through the town, but that road alone can only serve part of the people of Woodstock and can anyone travel over the other 50 or 60 miles of highway in Woodstock apart from the State road and truthfully say there has been any improvement as they will average up?

Two years ago a great improvement was made on the hill south of John Howe's, but unless something is done soon, the road will lapse back to its former condition. At the junction with the Greenwood road near John Howe's the center of the road is about two feet lower than the edges, through which the water from every shower pours, wearing it still deeper, and the rocks have a tendency to make people say things.

Can we afford to allow our roads to get so poor that many of our farmers will move away rather than ride over them year after year, and those who remain have their good nature ruined? Our State trunk line from Greenwood line through our village to Paris line is a good road, and the State will see that it is kept in good condition. Now let us work to make the other two roads entering our village and the branches leading into them good roads. It would mean much for the welfare and prosperity of our farmers and that in turn means prosperity for our village. It is up to us.

WIND.

Its Uses and Might Be Uses.

Wind is perhaps the most used and the most wasted of all the natural forces. We are all acquainted with the many uses of wind and its cheapness would warrant its use to many.

Wind is free to all and so far is not taxed or its use prohibited by the laws. It has long been appreciated by sailors and our continent was discovered by wind.

It is made use of by politicians to a great extent and has carried many to Congress. Ministers use it and many public speakers, especially lawyers.

It has brought sentence to many an innocent soul and has saved many a guilty one from the toils of the law.

Sousa has become rich and famous by his great talent in training wind to whiz through brass and wood.

At this windy season of the year one is led to contemplate much when listening to the mad rush of the invisible force which ever comes and is gone—of the large amount of energy which is apparently wasted.

Why does not some eager, energetic inventor study out how to chain up some of this flying force and thus have it tamed ready to use when and wheresoever mankind uses power to do work?

It is not for the writer to determine how it could be stored and dealt out when wanted, but perhaps some of its uses could be named which might induce an inventor to put his brains to work and thus gain not only wealth but the everlasting gratitude of mankind.

There is hardly any kind of housework but could be successfully done by power could it be obtained. How easy, healthy and quick would sweeping become could the housewife have a large, powerful supply of wind somewhere and at the required time open all the doors and windows and cause a high March gale to blow all the dirt and dust out and away, thus sweeping, dusting and ventilating combined. Washing and ironing would become mere play when done by wind power.

In the advent of an invention to utilize wind as a power to do work it would become a staple article in our stores. But it is likely that Sears & Roebuck would be able to furnish wind at a much lower price than our local dealers, as Chicago is the "windy city."—Otisfield, Me.

Fast Driving an Injury.

A smooth road is a constant temptation for automobile drivers to open their throttles and let their machines go. No man who has never driven an automobile can understand how easy it is to scorch on a highway that offers a smooth, hard surface for a few miles. But that is no reason why they should endanger their own lives and the lives of others by so doing.

If we are going to have better roads in Maine, and we are getting them very rapidly, those who drive over them in automobiles must recognize the fact that they are not race courses and that there will be people who will want to drive along them in horse-drawn vehicles or will want to go in the opposite direction from what some particular driver may want to go. In short, they must recognize that even State and government built roads are public highways and not private courses.

The application of these remarks is to the unreasonable speeding where these have been built. But instead of a reasonable rate of speed we find that many automobile drivers are sending their cars along at the rate of 50 or 75 miles an hour, which is neither safe for themselves or for others who may desire to use the road. No serious accident may have happened as yet, but if fast driving continues there will be some and some of a very serious nature.

Nor is that all. When people who desire to use this road for horse-drawn vehicles find that they cannot do it in safety, and when people who drive automobiles for comfort and not for speed find that they are in constant danger of being run down, they will turn to other highways and they will also withdraw their support from the so-called good roads movement.

When they do, that will be an end of good roads. Nothing is surer than that. Therefore, if automobile drivers want more roads, they will cease to use the highway as a race course, and will treat it as public property, which it is. If they do not, other automobile owners and drivers who are disposed to be more reasonable, should see that they are made to obey the law, even if one or two have to be sent to jail as an example to others. This is of vital importance if we are to have better highways in Maine.

War May End Before Begun.

Early resumption of friendly diplomatic conversations with the de facto government of Mexico to the end that peace and order may be restored in northern Mexico and along the border, is expected to be the next step of the United States in its relations with its southern neighbor.

Some of the militia is to be sent into Mexico to guard General Pershing's line of communication.

OUR PRESENT AND PAST RELATIONS WITH MEXICO

In these days of strain and stress, when any moment may bring the fateful news that war has been declared between the United States and its sister republic at the south, it is well to look back somewhat and review our relations with Mexico from the years immediately preceding the outbreak of the war in 1846, down to the present time, in order that our view of the situation may not be clouded by partisanship, nor by the too-oft repeated sentiment that we stand for our country whether it be right or wrong. We love our country. We will be loyal to it and must stand with it wherever it may be led, whatever wisdom or folly there may be in the leading. We cannot, however, blindfold our eyes to the fact that a nation must be judged the same as an individual, because it is composed of individuals, and if its ethics do not measure up to the best, we must admit, however unwillingly, that our democracy has failed.

Historically as far back as we can trace, Mexico is the eighth century. It was inhabited at the time by a race of people known as the Toltecs, a people of mild and peaceful instincts, who cultivated the soil, wisely utilized the vast resources of the country and brought it to a remarkable state of civilization. Unhappily, famine and the accompanying pestilence practically wiped them out in the eleventh century and they were succeeded by the Astecs, under whose dominion there was a reversion to savagery; albeit a savagery marked by prodigious development, for in two centuries and a half they became the predominating race and at the time of the Spanish conquest their empire extended from ocean to ocean. The monarch wielded despotic power save over his feudal vassals. The people were abject slaves. Following the arrival of Cortez, who landed at Vera Cruz in 1519, the native empire crumbled away and the people were ground under the heel of the conquerors. For three hundred years was the country ill-governed and its people oppressed, and during these three centuries the discontent grew until 1810, when open rebellion broke out and continued for eleven years. Murder and pillage were rampant. The country was in a state of civil war. In 1824 the Republic of Mexico was finally established, but with the exception of the thirty years of Diaz the country has been in continual and seething rebellion, improperly governed, a travesty on free and popular government.

From such a state of affairs grew our war with Mexico. The northern part of Mexico comprised the present states of Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, California, Nevada and Utah. Very early in the nineteenth century the course of empire took its way westward and American settlers had begun to press into the Spanish province of Texas before 1819. At first the Mexican goverment encouraged their coming, but it was soon seen that their presence boded danger. The newcomers had brought their slaves with them, and when the Mexican government issued a decree freeing all slaves, there was open revolt. Theodore Roosevelt in his life of Benton says this has been represented as the sole cause of the rebellion that led to the independence of Texas; "It was not a cause at all; it was merely one of the occasions." The majority of those who fought for Texan independence were adventurers from the States who went thither to enrich themselves and as is generally admitted, the conduct of these frontiersmen can be "justified on no possible plea of international morality or law." They were encouraged by the government of the United States in all their outlawry; not in the open way but by permitting arms and men to be sent to their help, and on the side doing a "little discreditable bullying in the diplomatic dealing with Mexico," which that unhappy country was in no position to resent.

The independence of Texas was but the beginning of our troubles with Mexico that have continued until the present day. Texas as a little isolated country was unthinkable. Annexation was the only logical course open to this country. It should have been done by purchase in accordance with the wise counsel of Adams and others, and in accordance with a treaty by which Mexico was offered ten million dollars indemnity for the territory, a treaty rejected by the Senate by a vote of 25 to 16. James G. Blaine in his "Twenty Years of Congress" says we were not guiltless towards Mexico in originally permitting, if not encouraging, our citizens to join in the revolt of one of the states of that Republic. At all events there was a serious division throughout this country on the question and when the time came for presidential nominations the choice of candidates was based upon their Texas leanings.

The Democratic Convention nominated Polk, who was pronouncedly in favor of annexation. Clay was nominated by the Whigs, but his sincerity in opposition was doubted. It was a close election, Polk winning, but without a majority of the popular vote. Polk was anxious to have the question settled before his inauguration, and to that end a joint resolution was introduced in Congress, which passed the House after a protracted discussion which rent in two the Democratic Party. The Senate also accepted the resolution in the last moments of session. Thus in the expiring days of an administration and Congress, annexation was carried through, just as under similar circumstances eight years before the independence of Texas had been acknowledged by the United States.

Mexico felt aggrieved and rightly. It construed the vote to mean a disposition on the part of the United States to grab territory irrespective of right. It was in no condition to wage warfare against this country at the time and events of the next two years show that without further complications there would have been no serious trouble between the two countries. Grant, who was fresh from West Point and attached to the army near the Mexican border, says in his Personal Memoirs that the presence of United States troops on the edge of disputed territory furthest from the Mexican settlements was not sufficient to provoke hostilities. He does not mince matters. "We were sent to provoke a fight, but it was essential that Mexico should commence it. It was very doubtful whether Congress would declare war, but if Mexico should attack our troops, the executive could announce, 'Whereas, war exists by the acts of, etc.,' and prosecute the contest with vigor." Mexico showing no willingness to come to the Nauces to drive the invaders from her soil, it became necessary for the invaders to approach within a convenient distance to be struck and they did so. General Ampudia, in command of the Mexican forces, sent a warning to General Taylor that he must retire from Mexican soil within twenty-four hours or arms and arms alone would decide the question. Despite this warning Taylor dispatched a party of dragoons, 63 in number, up the valley of the Rio Grande, where they encountered a force much larger than their own and after a short engagement in which some seventeen were killed and wounded, the Americans were surrounded and compelled to surrender.

When intelligence of this reached the United States the war spirit rose high. "Our country has been invaded and American blood spilled on American soil," was the cry heard on every side. President Polk, without waiting for the Mexican government to disavow the act, sent a hot message to Congress and he was forthwith authorized to use all the forces of the United States in waging the war if war it meant. Verily, history repeats itself.

The war was fought. The army of the United States in 1845 numbered about 5,000 men and 3,500 of them were at Corpus Christi, Texas, under General Zachary Taylor. In March of the following year Taylor moved southward to a point on the Rio Grande and called upon the governors of Louisiana and Texas for 5,000 volunteers. On the first day of May he moved eastward to open communications with Point Isabel. To intercept his return General Arista, commanding the Mexican force of about 6,000 men, moved to Palo Alto. In an engagement the Mexicans were put to flight and fell back to Resaca de la Palma, where a second battle took place, resulting in a rout for the Mexicans. Before news of these events could possibly have reached Washington, Congress declared war and authorized the President to call for 50,000 volunteers to serve one year. This was done on the pretence that our territory had been invaded, a pretence which Lincoln later showed up in his famous Spot Resolutions. Just at that time one of those ever-recurring revolutions broke out in Mexico, without which that country has never been content. It was in favor of the return of Santa Anna to power. The United States aided and abetted this revolution and Santa Anna re-entered the country, and President Polk, to create a feeling that the war was just, sent him a proposal for peace, knowing full well that it would be impossible for him to entertain it. The campaigns of Taylor and Scott, the occupation of Mexico City and the terms of the treaty of peace signed in February, 1848, are too well known to require repetition at this time.

From that time on there were intermittent periods of friendly relations between this country and Mexico; there was never law and order. The year 1878 marked a new era in the history of Mexico in the election of Porfirio Diaz, who has ruled with a firm hand for more than thirty years. Under his administration Mexico increased in wealth and power. Conditions improved and there was much co-operation for the maintenance of peace on the American continent. In 1911 Diaz in failing health was forced to retire; another revolution followed in which Francisco Madero was the ruling spirit. A fair election was held and the orderly inauguration of Madero offered promise of a restoration of stable government, but the hope was short-lived. Within three months there was another revolution in the north which soon spread to all parts of the country. The administration of Mr. Taft was confronted with many hard problems, but it maintained a strict neutrality, despite the frantic cries of the American interests that claimed their lives and property were being debauched. There was an insistant demand for armed intervention, to which President Taft turned a deaf ear. In the last days of the Taft administration the situation in Mexico entered a new phase. On Feb. 9, 1913, just about one month before President Wilson was inaugurated, the army in Mexico City revolted against the Madero government. On the morning of Feb. 23, Madero was assassinated by the deliberate contrivance of Huerta and his conspirators. Huerta was made provisional President and in announcing the overthrow of the Madero government, claimed the recognition of the United States.

Such was the Mexican situation when President Wilson was inaugurated. He inherited from the Taft administration the Mexican trouble in its most aggravated form. We do not even assume that he has handed the situation wisely. We do not know that any President could do so. Mexico is fighting her way out of slavery. It is very doubtful how much she ought to be interfered with. The United States has not dealt with Mexico wisely nor justly in the past and there is small reason why the Mexicans should take our attitude as altogether friendly. President Wilson has promoted friendly relations with the remaining republics of this continent to a remarkable degree, and he has done everything possible to prevent the clash of arms which now seems so imminent. If, as is asserted, we are without a friend among the great powers of Europe—an assertion which we regard as absolutely false—we may well congratulate ourselves that aside from this Mexican trouble we of the Western Hemisphere have that abundance of friendship that seems to be utterly lacking on the other side of the Atlantic.

SHEEP RAISING PROFITABLE.

For profitable sheep raising, the farmer must be willing to pay proper attention to his flock at the critical times during the year. He should produce lambs of early maturity that can be marketed at the best prices. He should protect his sheep from dogs by arousing community interest for sheep, enforcing the dog laws and keeping sheep within protected quarters at night.

The farmer should utilize his pastures to the greatest degree. Whenever possible, he should make use of corn silage with clover and, alfalfa hay in feeding the ewes, supplementing the feeds with grain following lambing. He should select breeding sheep that possess merit in wool production as well as mutton production. Breeding and exercise will give vigor and health to sheep and enable them to make rapid growth.

A pure-bred ram of type and quality should sire the lambs. Protection, plenty of ventilation and dry footing are desired in the sheep sheds and quarters. A knowledge of market values and demands is desirable in sheep raising. A flock of 50 to 100 breeding ewes is a good number for the average farm. The proper realization of the important fact that sheep could take in the control of weeds on the farm and the upbuilding of the fertility, together with the additional profits that come when sheep are kept, will bring about in Maine a return to sheep farming.

NORTHEAST LOVELL.

Josiah Chute has returned to his work at Freeman Andrews'.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank McAlister and son Raymond and wife, visited Sunday at Mrs. Mary Kendall's.

There was a celebration at George Eastman's the 4th.

Mrs. Percy Frisbee and son are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanford.

Mrs. Joseph Farnham of the Center did some work for Isabelle Files at her father's, Freeman Andrews', Friday.

Stephen Kimball's eyes are still in a very bad condition.

Your correspondent wishes to write that whoever tells the story that dumb animals do not know or understand is surely entirely wrong for a dumb animal is far brighter than the person who is speaking about the innocent beasts. My husband and I have the past week caught five striped squirrels, two old ones and three baby ones, and believe me, they are the smartest little family that ever lived. We sit for twenty minutes at a time watching them and their attractive ways.

We feed them in their cage with corn, strawberries, lettuce, and also give them plenty of water to drink. They are very healthy and therefore need their ration of water. I will say, they are very neat and every time they drink or eat they give themselves a thorough scrubbing and a bath which has no equal. They keep their home also very neat. They can take anywhere from 10 to 15 kernels of corn in their mouths at once. They are very easy to catch and very interesting to watch. Three or four times a day the old ones try to teach the young ones and indeed they have a few tough scraps before the young ones get their lesson learned. The old ones as a rule do not like the young ones after they get half as big as they are.

Annie Brackett of the Center visited at Freeman Andrews' Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Files attended the school exercises at Stoneham Friday evening.

Brunelle-Noyes.

A very pretty wedding occurred on Wednesday evening, June 21, at the home of Mrs. Bertha L. Noyes, Gorham, N. H., when her daughter, Marjorie Pearl, became the bride of Charles Lenard Brunelle of Berlin.

Rev. Fred C. Leining, for several years pastor of All Souls Universalist church, came up from Biddeford to perform the ceremony, which was a single ring service. Marjorie was very lovely in her wedding gown of white crepe de chine with trimmings of Georgette crepe and Irish lace, carrying bride roses. A pearl brooch, the gift of her mother, was her only ornament. She was attended by Evelyn Mason, who wore yellow crepe de chine and carried sweet peas.

Young friends of the bride had decorated the home with daisies, ferns and bridal wreath, arranging a bower in the parlor beneath which the couple were married. As Hazel Barron played the wedding march, the bride and bridesmaid came down the front stairway and entered the parlor, where they were met by the groom, and Carroll L. Noyes, brother of the bride, as best man. A reception to immediate relatives and friends of the couple followed and refreshments of punch, cake and dainties were served. The bride cut the first piece of wedding cake.

Mrs. Brunelle is the daughter of the late Levi A. and Bertha L. Noyes, is a graduate of Gorham high school with the class of 1911, and has for the past three years been a teacher at the Riverside School, Cascade District, Gorham, and is very popular with the young people of the town. Mr. Brunelle is a native of Vermont but has been for the past four years a resident of Berlin, where he is employed in the electrical department of the Berlin Mills Co. After a honeymoon spent at Averill Lake and Canaan, Vt., the home of Mr. Brunelle's family, the young people will reside at the home of Mrs. Bertha Noyes, Mechanic St. There were many beautiful wedding gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Ames were married fifty years ago last February at Chatham, N. H. Mrs. Ames was Lydia McKeen before her marriage.

On account of the stormy weather and their being so far apart, the children were unable to be present at that time, so last evening about thirty of their friends were invited in in honor of the event. The house was prettily decorated with cut flowers.

Games and music were enjoyed during the evening, after which a buffet lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Locke of Norway spent the week-end with her mother, Mrs. Isadore Poland.

Bliss, Ida and Clifton Ames of Waltham, Mass., are visiting with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Ames.

William Frye was in town recently.

Oxford Grange held its regular meeting Saturday, July 1st.

A dance will be held at the Grange hall, July 8th.

While the grass is very tall and looks to be very heavy it is yet very light. What we need is two weeks of hot weather to harden it up before cutting. Haying will be ten days later this year than usual owing to the wet weather.

The new grange hall at Welchville will be opened with a dance, Saturday evening, July 8, music by Pettengill's orchestra. Grand march at 8 o'clock. Floor manager, Walter Holden; aids, C. H. Brett, Fred Gammon and A. L. Chaplin. Ice cream at intermission.

DINNER OF WATER DADDYLONGLEGS.

By D. Crommett Clark.

I wish to make a record of a natural history observation which fell to me during the course of a vacation spent in a pedestrian tour in the Canadian Province of New Brunswick. On September 11, 1915, I was walking from Lepreau to Musquash, and something more than half way of the ten miles between the two hamlets, stopped at a brook on the northern slope of a hill, for a drink of water. The wooden plank bridge was too high for the taking of a drink from it with a dipper, so a passage was worked through the thick bushes to a point some six or eight rods above, where a pool about five feet across was fed by a trickling little current, while the main stream rushed down on the farther side. A nice large smooth rock afforded a seat with my back to the grassy bank, while feet were stretched out to the somewhat lower rock just beyond. After a rest of fifteen minutes or so, I was about to reload my shoulders with the pack when a fat green worm about an inch and one-third in length came tumbling down the brook and into the pool just below me. I was wondering if he was a species known to me, and noticed him climbing upon a dead leaf which was slowly turning in the otherwise imperceptible eddy in the center of the pool.

The pool was inhabited by six of those queer specimans of animal life—probably insects—variously known as water daddylonglegs, skippers, water horses, and perhaps by other names. They were darting restlessly about the pool with their feet resting lightly on the water. No purpose was apparent in their movements until on of them bumped against the worm on his leaf refuge. The insect drew back three inches or so, and then darted directly at the worm, following his impact by instant retreat. The worm flung his head around in the direction of the blow, and found nothing. The insect kept up his blows and retreats. I could not see the worm closely enough to determine whether he tried to bite his tormentor, but that was the idea suggested by his head's frantic efforts to reach the source of those blows.

A thick, whitish fluid began to ooze from punctures in the worm's sides. The assailant, aided by the eddy, had attacked the victim from every direction. The poor worm abandoned his efforts to reach the destroyer, and was writhing, seemingly in helpless and aimless agony. The slayer continued his attacks, but made his retreats less quickly.

Another water daddylonglegs bumped against the worm, and drew back, as if to attack in the same way that the first had done. The posessor of the worm darted around his prey and launched himself at the intruder. He struck the second insect fairly in the side, and bowled him over, so that for a moment he lay struggling in the water with feet flourishing frantically in the air. He soon regained his feet and promptly evacuated the neighborhood of the worm.

The first of the water daddylonglegs turned to his finally motionless victim, and placed himself astride the partially submerged body. With head tipped down and pressed against the green skin of the slaughtered worm, he stood in a huddled attitude and apparently without moving for three or four minutes. Then he went away, skipping over the water after the fashion of his tribe.

I had partially risen to go, when the other insects began to dart across the pool to the body of the worm. It seemed as if they did so deliberately and not by accident, though each had to make several tries before finding it. One would hurry three-fourths of the way across the pool, turn back and again pass the worm, but not so far, and turn again. Not one of them found the apparent object of his search in a single trip directly from the edge of the pool to its center, where the food supply was slowly turning round and round. Within about ten or twelve minutes all of them reached the spot, and all repeated the movements of the first water daddylonglegs, by hovering over the green object that was a hundred times larger than themselves, and each one's head was pressed for a few minutes against the green skin. At one time two were peacefully standing over the prostrate worm together.

How they knew of the dead worm puzzled me. I was satisfied that it was not by sight, for the first and second insects had plainly bumped against the worm by accident, and the later insects had been unable to find the food except by experiments in the matter of direction. I lifted the worm out of the water with a stick, and tried to determine if there was any odor which may have guided them, but the evidence was negative. Human nostrils are not keen enough, anyway, to afford very valuable scientific information on the matter of odors. It may have been from the worm's bodily juices spreading over the surface of the water, though I could detect no discoloration to indicate that. If the knowledge was waterborne, and reached them through the contact of their feet with the water, did it do so by means of a sense of feeling or of taste? I give it up.

I had spent more than half an hour at watching the natural act of one life maintaining itself by the taking of another life. As I trudged toward Musquash village with the knapsack on my sweating back, the war in Europe was far away, but the water insects and the worm were a present object lesson of the tragedy of the world. There came to me a conscicusness of having heard or read of some one who had by a struggle in lowly nature been moved to feelings such as were stirring me. At last it came; I was turning over in my head not merely the thoughts but some of the language used by Thoreau in his story of the battle of the ants. I knew how that other man had felt years before, and he would have understood how I felt on that September afternoon.—Forest and Stream.

NEW FACES ON SPECIE.

Dimes, quarters and half-dollars of new design will be minted after July 1, Secretary McAdoo announced at Washington recently. For the first time since 1891, a change will be affected in these pieces.

The face of the new half-dollar will bear a full length of Liberty, with a background of the American flag flying in the breeze. The goddess is striding toward the dawn of a new day, carrying the laurel and oak branches, symbolic of civil and military glory. The reverse side shows an eagle perched high upon a mountain crag, wings unfolded. Growing from a rift in the rock is a sapling of mountain pine, symbolic of America.

The design of the 25-cent piece is intended to typify the awakening of the country to its own protection, Secretary McAdoo said. Liberty, a full length figure, is shown stepping toward the country's gateway, bearing upraised a shield from which the covering is being drawn. The right hand bears an olive brach of peace. Above the head is the word "Liberty," and below the feet "1916." The reverse bears a figure of an eagle in full flight, wings extended, and the inscription, "United States of America," and "E Pluribus Unum."

Both the half-dollar and the quarter bear the phrase "In God We Trust." The design of the dime is simple. Liberty with a winged cap is shown on the fore-side and on the reverse is a design of a bundle of rods, and a battle-axe, symbolical of unity, "Wherein Lies the Nation's Strength."

Swimming.

To many a man confined in some stuffy office or factory, the boyhood memories of the old swimming hole have a glamor of romance. Nothing seems to stand out more clearly in his memory as a joy of youth. The cold refreshment of the familiar stream, such a relief after a wiltering hot day, brings boy nature to the highest point of excitement. It stirs the frolic spirit in the heart of youth, and in no other place is there any such display of boisterous spirits.

The yelling of boys of the ball game has in it the zest of competitive struggle, forecasting the envies and emulations of later life. The pure animal ecstacy of a bunch of young swimmers making the region resound with their gleeful cries seems like human nature's pure exuberance under the most refreshing caress of Mother Earth.

In properly conducted swimming lessons there is a wonderfully fine physical development. The boy comes to the swimming hole, his shoulders bent over by study at a desk. In swimming he is simply compelled to practice deep breathing against the water's strong resistance. No other exercise can be equally useful in developing the chest and heart. It was shown in one college test that 34 men made an average gain of eight pounds weight and 23 cubic inches of lung capacity, by taking four swimming lessons a week for six weeks.

Unfortunately a good many boys never learn to swim. They may be located at a distance from any suitable river, lake, or pool. On vacations they are relegated to the inglorious task of guarding the clothes of their companions. They are a peril to everyone in later life the moment they enter any kind of a boat. They miss a manly sport and the purest fun of boyhood. Families inconveniently located as respects this sport should make every effort to remedy the deficiency with good instructors for their children.

Annual Campfire.

One of the pleasant occasions of the year was the annual campfire given by Harry Rust Post, W. R. C. No. 45, Thursday, June 29th, at Grange hall, Norway, Posts and Corps being represented from Bethel, Mechanic Falls, Hebron, Lewiston, Lovell, Waterford, North Waterford, Oxford and South Paris. Over two hundred and fifty partook of a bountiful dinner. The dining hall was attractive in the National colors; flowers of the season adorning the tables. The escorts to the dining hall with the National colors were Mrs. Evelyn Young, Mrs. Harriet Fuller, Mrs. Sarah Woodsum, and Miss Etta Noyes, the march being played by Mrs. Nellie Dwinal, Past President of Sampson Corps of Rochester, N. H. Following the dinner an interesting program, in charge of Miss L. Etta Noyes, assisted by Mrs. Addie Thurston, was presented, which consisted of the following numbers: Singing, "Star Spangled Banner" by all; prayer by Rev. Chester Gore Miller; address of welcome by Mrs. Alice Danforth, who said, "Comrades, Members of the W. R. C. and friends, one of the pleasantest duties, either in public or private, is to speak words of welcome to visiting friends. Today this pleasant duty is again mine. In the name of Harry Rust Post and Corps, I greet you, and bid you welcome to Norway. This delightful word, "Welcome" old, yet ever new, brings us thoughts of kindness, good cheer, gladness, hospitality, enhanced in this instance by Friendship, Charity, Loyalty, which are the watchwords of our order. If we are true to them, like our own stately pines, that withstand alike the summer sunshine and the cold blasts of winter, we shall stand by our friends, not only in prosperity, but in adversity and misfortunes, remembering that,

"Kind hearts are the gardens of life,
Kind thoughts are the roots,
Kind words are the blossoms,
Kind deeds are the fruits."

While we welcome you in gladness, we think of those who were with us, and today are not.

"He sees when their footsteps falter, when their hearts grow weak and faint,
He marks when their strength is failing, and listens to each complaint,
He bids them rest for a season, for the pathway has grown too steep,
And folded in fair, green pastures, He giveth
His loved ones sleep."

Two years ago when I stood before you I felt like a novice in the W. R. C., but now after over three years of membership, I feel a little more like a veteran. Although, for various reasons, I am not a very active member still the longer I belong, the more I realize what a splendid work the organizations are doing. Aside from relief work, which I think comes first, and which you probably all know more about than I do, there is the work with the Flag. Whenever and wherever there is an opportunity, these orders try to instill into the minds and hearts of the children and youth of our land, reverence and loyalty to our flag, which stands for what we hold most dear. It seems as if patriotism in our country was not being taught to the children in the home and school as it should be and as it was in the earlier days, that we are given over to commercialism, to worship of the "Almight dollar." But a few days ago, our boys marched away at their country's call, as did the boys of '98 and '61. We shall never know how heavy their hearts were, but they went with smiling faces to meet they know not what. We hate and abhor war, with all its horors and unspeakable suffering. "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn." None of us know so well what reasons we have to hate war, as do many of these men before me, and whom we all honor for what they sacrificed and suffered in the early '60s, but until nations become more civilized and more christianized, than they seem to be at the present, they must be taught that our citizens are to be protected, and our flag respected, wherever they may be, and so I would have our children and our children's children taught to love and honor our beautiful flag.

"On History's crimson pages, high on the roll of Fame,
The story of Old Glory burns in deathless words of fame.
'Twas cradled in the blinding smoke amid the war of guns,
Its lullabies were battle cries, the shout of Freedom's sons.
It is the same red, white and blue, proud emblem of the free,
It is the flag that floats above this land of liberty.
We'll greet it when we meet it, the flag that waves on high,
And hats off all along the line where Freedom's flag goes by.
Oh, the love, the tears, the triumph, it in every fibre holds,
Oh, the unforgotten heroes, enshrouded in its folds,
It is the ensign of the ages, Freedom's gift and shrine,
Our dear star spangled banner, your father's flag and mine."

Again, I bid you a most cordial welcome; remarks were made by Mr. Miller, and those were followed by an illustrated song and tableau by Mrs. Eva Jackson; piano duet, Mrs. Nellie Dwinal and Miss Nellie Jackson; pantomine, "On the Eve of War" with song by Rosie and Cherry Noble; recitation, Eleanor Jackson; reading, Mrs. H. L. Nichols; violin and piano duet, Azola and Esther Pike; Flag dance, Rosie and Cherry Noble, accompanied by Mrs. Jackson and Mellie Dunham; reading, Mrs. Mary Bicknell; piano duet, Doris Brooks and Adeline DeCosta; reading, Mrs. Julian Brown: singing, "America"; benediction, Rev. Correspondent Co. D, 2d Maine Infantry

June 30, 1916.

While Stopping at Cleveland, O.

Although General Sherman said that war is hell, Co. D of the 2d Maine Inf. is not yet ready to agree with him, for, aside from the discomfont caused by the lack of proper sleeping arrangements, the trip thus far has been exceptionally pleasant. The receptions given the regiment at every stop are largely responsible for this, and, with the exception of the ovation given the men at Portland, the warmth of these increases with every mile that separates them from their New England homes. The regiment is going to the front with the cheers of thousands ringing in their ears.

The send-off at Portland in particular will never be forgotten by the 2nd Infantry. In Augusta thousands lined the streets on either side; but those thousands were for the most part undemonstrative or tearful. The sadness of parting cast a gloom over all that was hard to throw off, Co. D as a whole being in particular affected by the loss of Captain Stevens, Lieutenant Pike and Sergeant Cole. But in Portland the contact between the regiment and the crowd was unmarred by the pangs which spring from individual and personal relationship; the vast throng in the station represented the spirit of a city splendid and patriotic, turning out to a man to wish a regiment God-speed. Bands were playing, thousands singing and cheering, flags were waving everywhere. And the soldiers were lifted out of themselves by a deep and exhilarating sense of gratitude. Old regulars and volunteer veterans say they have never seen anything in the way of a send-off that bettered it. Many said they had never seen the equal, even in '98.

The crowd not only cheered, every man in the regiment was loaded down with cigarettes, candy, fruit, sandwiches, root beer and canned delicacies, and the regiment left Portland with a memory of Maine's leading city that can never fail to quicken the beating of their hearts. Portland stands for the last word in Americanism.

However, the men are now realizing that this spirit is nation wide. While there have been no further organized receptions, many people being uninformed concerning the routes taken by various organizations, there are big crowds at every station to greet the sections, and above all they are generous crowds. The people of New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio would seem to have no personal interest in an organization from another state, but they are disproving this at every step. Hundreds of cheering, fresh-faced girls pass along the train at each stop to shake hands with the men and to wish them good luck, hundreds of others are continually coming forward with fruit, matches, stockings, cakes, candy, chicken, cigarettes, etc. To the men who have never been out of Maine before all this is a revelation; they are realizing the great fact that after all we are not a mere union of States, but one indisoluable nation.

Several changes have been made in Co. D since they left Norway. Captain Moses Stiles has been assigned as company commander to replace Captain Guy Stevens, held back for medical treatment. Private Bendix Peterson, ex-regular, has been appointed Quarter-master Sergeant to replace Sergeant Wing, now in charge of the mess. Private Campbell, ex-regular, coast artilleryman, has been promoted to a sergeancy to fill the vacancy left by Sergeant Cole. Privates McGrew, Brackett and Lenton, all ex-regulars, have been made corporals. At the present writing the men are planning to elect 1st Sergeant Harry Fleming as 2nd Lieutenant to fill the vacancy left by 2nd Lieutenant Pike. It is hoped that Headquarters at Washington will approve of it.

Mothers who are worrying about the welfare of their sons in Co. D need have little concern over their physical comfort. The men have all proven to be cheerful, willing and amenable to discipline, and the non-commissioned staff contains several experienced ex-regulars who have seen tropical service. Hardships will be inevitable, but the members of Co. D will not be allowed to make the mistakes made by the volunteer organizations in '98.

Apropos of this, no relative or friend of a Co. D member should send him cakes, pies or fruit of any description. He will not be allowed to eat food of this description unless it is prepared or purchased by the mess sergeant. Candy will be acceptable, chocolate in preference. Tobacco in any form will be especially welcome, cigarettes being most in demand, and as a mobilization camp is always somewhat congested at first, the men will all be in need of the following articles: matches, towels, soap, lightweight underwear and stockings, (preferably poros-knit, as to the former, and in two pieces, with short drawers) handkerchiefs, pencils, writing paper, envelopes, needles, brown thread, tooth brushes, tooth paste, pocket combs, corn plaster, adhesive tape, small hand looking-glasses, razors, shaving soap, shoe brushes, shaving brushes, stamps, scissors, pocket knives, talcum powder, cold cream, listerine, 3-in-1 oil, epsom salts, etc. A great deal of talcum powder will be needed to prevent rash from excessive perspiration. These articles should be addressed to the Company member, giving his rank as follows:

Private John Smith,
Company D,
2d Maine Infantry,
Laredo,
Texas.

Do not forget to address it to the 2d Maine Infantry, as there is a regiment called the 2d Infantry in the regulars, and this will cause confusion.

Old members of the Guard will be glad to know that First Sergeant Fleming was complimented this morning for having the cleanest car and the neatest company in the battalion.

Sergeant Hickey has composed a singing ditty which will be used henceforth as the company song. The words of the chorus follow:

I want to go to Mexico,
Where the boys are marching to and fro,
Where the spiders crawl on every hand,
Way down there on the Rio Grande;
I want to go to Mexico,
Where they've killed my fellow-soldiers,
You can tell my friends I'm going to
M E X, I don't know how to spell it,
But I'm going, yes, I'm going,
Down to fight for Uncle Sam.

Mrs. Etta L. Warren of Harrison, has purchased an Oakland car of the Norway Auto Company.

Walter Tubbs and family and Roy Pratt and family went to Ketchum the 4th on a fishing trip.

Richard P. Laselle and family of Gardiner are visiting relatives in town over the 4th.

Asa Young has moved into the Cummings rent on Whitman street.

STUART M. TERRIER.

Mention has heretofore been made in the Advertiser of one of Norway's summer visitors, Mr. Stuart M. Terrier of Baltimore, Md. It will be recalled that he took our party on an automobile trip to Gettysburg and other places of interest last month. This one of the three brothers I had not been much acquainted with, but during my few days' association with him, I came to admire his great ability and manly qualities, and became greatly attached to him. The excellent position he has today in his home city I am fain to believe, was secured not by any political or other "pull," but from sheer ability. And this opinion is strengthened from seeing a railroad tunnel through a mountain and several long and high bridges constructed from his surveys and plans, which I saw from the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. train while passing up the Potomac through the mountains on my way to Chicago.

The point, however, I wish to emphasize, and which prompted the writing of this sketch, is that wherever we went and whatever the circumstances, we found surrounding us—as well in Pennsylvania as Maryland; in Gettysburg as in Baltimore or Annapolis; in public parks or crowded thoroughfares—there was always the same respect and observance of the law because it was the law.

How often have we seen young men—yes, old ones too, for that matter—evade regulations and requirements, regarded as necessary though frequently vexatious, to gain an advantage or a desired result, and this quite as much to show their smartness as from any other motive.

And when I measure up this young man of splendid qualities with others who lack his trustworthiness, his conscientiousness and moral worth, I have no doubt that he has a great future before him, and if he cares for public position, who can doubt that its honors will come to him?

BUCKFIELD

New School Superintendent.

At a meeting of the school boards of the towns comprising the union districts of Buckfield, Hartford and Hebron, Chester C. Tuttle, principal of Bridgton Academy for the past four years, was elected to the position of school superintendent. Mr. Tuttle, who is a native of Buckfield, comes well qualified for the duties of his new field. His early education was received in the schools of his home town, his high school training at Edward Little high school of Auburn, where he was graduated in 1900. During the next year he taught district school at Buckfield. In the fall of 1901 he entered Bates College, where he remained three years, leaving to accept the principalship of the high school at Bryant's Pond for the year 1904-1905. He then entered the senior class at Bowdoin, where he received his A. B. degree in 1906.

After graduating from Bowdoin, Mr. Tuttle was appointed collector of wild land taxes in the office of the State treasurer at Augusta, which position he resigned in 1909 after having been elected to the principalship of Caribou high school. During the year 1910-1911 he attended the graduate school of arts and sciences of Harvard University, after which he was principal of Biddeford high school for one year.

In the fall of 1912 Mr. Tuttle entered the field of private school work as principal of Bridgton Academy at North Bridgton. His success in this work, which required much executive as well as educational ability, may be judged from the following. He took the academy with 42 students. During the first year the number was increased to 59, with an average attendance of 52. During the four years of his administration the number of students was steadily increased to a maximum of 79 for the last year—an increase in attendance of nearly 100 per cent. There has also been a correspondingly large gain in standard of scholarship of the students and in quality of the courses maintained, so that it may be safely said that the graduates of Bridgton Academy have received a training that is second to none in the State.

Mr. Tuttle is a member of the Evening Star Lodge of Masons of Buckfield, of the Royal Arch Chapter of Turner, of the Bowdoin Chemical Club, of the Boylston Chemical Club of Harvard, of the Harvard Masonic Club and of the Maine Automobile Association. He was married in 1912 to Lillian Maude Small of Pownal, a high school and college classmate, who was well known as a teacher in Yarmouth Academy and as principal of the high school at Old Orchard for three years. Mr. and Mrs. Tuttle have one child, Charles Lemuel, born last July.

Keep Your Kidneys in a Healthy Condition

Do not neglect your kidneys. They have a great deal of work to do, and to do it right they must be vigorous and healthy.

Every drop of blood in your body must be filtered through the kidneys. If the kidneys become clogged, poison, in the form of uric acid, will be thrown back into the blood and remain there. This poison will cause backache, headache, rheumatism and other troubles.
